PENCILLETES.

Gann Mynatt, who was sentenced for fifteen years to the penitentiary at the Clinton Circuit Court last week, passed through Knoxville yesterday on his way to that institution.

A little four year old woke up very early one morning, and seeing the full moon from the window, he innocently remarked: "I should think it was about time for Dad to take that moon in."

A person was told that three yards of cloth, by being wet, would shrink one-quarter of a yard. "Well, then," he inquired, "if you should wet a quarter of a yard, would there be any left?"

A cruel joke at the expense of those ladies who are perpetually striving to gain a hearing in the Press has been going the rounds of literary circles, to the effect "that they look much better in muslin than in print."

Oh no! Go on the Cincinnati Southern Railroad and work at $1.50 a day as long as one fish will bite each day. The idea is preposterous! And thus remarking, he started out again for another day's work on the river bank.

The New Market News says: Wheat and corn are dull sale now in this market, with a downward tendency in prices. Nearly all orders have been withdrawn. Dog hides are coming into the tan-yards by the wholesale. One man brought in fifteen the other day, and it wasn't a good day for dog skins either. The people have certainly elected him "dog-pelter," to go ahead of the Assessor.

Bristol News: A cow on the farm of Mrs. Mary Davis, some two miles South of Montgomery, in this county, gave birth some days ago, to a hairless calf. Except from the knees downward, where there is hair of the color and texture of a fawn, the skin is perfectly smooth and tender, so much so, that a slight exposure to the sun has blistered its ears, neck and back. It is of fine size and in excellent condition.

Jonesboro Journal: From recent observation, we are sanguine in the belief that the yield of the wheat crop will be much larger than was generally expected after the recent cold spell, and the blade presents a deep, rich green color, the stalk is strong and vigorous and stands thick upon the ground. Early wheat is injured to some extent, it is true, but fields sown late are not damaged. We think that we are safe in saying that there will be a two-thirds crop.

The Chattanooga Times says: The stringers for the street railroad were laid yesterday from First to Second streets. The cars will be running from Ninth street to the river, Col. Harris says, in less than two weeks.—Gov. Porter commissioned the Justices elected last Friday on the general ticket. Their commissions arrived night before last, and several of them were sworn in yesterday. Only nine were commissioned, there being a tie between Doolittle and Byron. We have not heard whether a new election will be ordered for the remaining Justice or not.

Morristown Gazette: Capt. Moore, Roadmaster, has had his corps of track-layers busily engaged for several days past, removing the old iron, and laying down in its stead, the fishbar rail, on the line of the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia Road. We understand about six miles of the new rail will be put down, commencing near the depot and going east.—The smoke house of our fellow-citizen Taylor Witt, was entered a few nights ago, by undermining the wall, and robbed of a considerable quantity of bacon. From various circumstances connected with burglary, the thief may soon come to grief and find himself in the keeping of Maj. Tom. O'Connor.

An old gentleman was anxious to collect a debt overdue. An attachment was issued and placed in the hands of a newly-elected constable, to serve. The old gentleman, whom we will call B., went along to show him a cow he wished to attach. The constable ran into a mudhole and mired down. B. grabbed her by the tail and yelled excitedly to the officer to attach her quickly. "How shall I do it?" cried the officer. "Why, rub it on her!" yelled B. It was rubbed on her accordingly. "What next?" inquired the officer. "Why, rub it on the other side, and rub hard," yelled B., in frantic efforts to hold the cow in the mud by the tail. "Now hang it on her horn," then said B., stepping back to view the process. "I will show him whether he will pay me or not, the onery cuss!"

Items from Union, in Bristol News: Mr. Wm. Hough, a young man about eighteen years of age, son of Mr. Hough, of this town, accidentally shot himself this morning (Monday). The wounds were very painful, but not dangerous. After quite an adventurous trip Col. Folson and his squad have returned. The report of one of the men being killed was false, but the party were fired on on two occasions. They made a successful raid. They captured and destroyed seven mills, burnt and tore down nineteen still houses and captured eleven prisoners, some of whom were released, as they had not violated the Internal Revenue law. They also succeeded in capturing the chief of the gang Mullins, or, as Dr. John Hammer calls him, the king bee of the hive. The parties captured waived their examination before the United States Commissioner, and were put in Sneedville jail, there to await the next term of the Federal court at Knoxville.—The wheat so badly injured by the late severe cold spell is now rapidly improving and assuming its natural rich, green color. The farmers are in better spirits.

ADDRESS

Of the Centennial Executive Committee for East Tennessee.

We address ourselves to all the citizens of East Tennessee who take an interest in the Centennial Exhibition at Philadelphia. And who is there who does not take an interest in it? No such opportunity has occurred heretofore, or can occur again within an hundred years to make known so favorably the resources and advantages we possess.

We have a country that is endowed by nature with many very remarkable features. Within the area of East Tennessee is comprised a greater variety and abundance of minerals than is possessed by any other country of like proportions. We have marble, lead, zinc, mica, copper, granite, limestone, gold, and last, but not least, iron and coal. Coal, iron and copper, together with marble, limestone and zinc, we have in great abundance.

We have one of the best watered countries in the world, with water power for machinery that is unsurpassed. We have a healthy, genial, temperate climate, which connected with our diversified soils enable us to raise as great a variety of produce, if not greater than any other country. Duty to ourselves and our posterity demands that we diligently prepare to clearly make known our immense resources and advantages at the Centennial Exhibition at Philadelphia, to the representatives of the world, who will be assembled there on that occasion. To facilitate and further this grand and interesting object we have called a meeting of all the Commissioners, Committees and citizens who feel an interest in the subject to assemble at Knoxville on the 3rd of June, next. The meeting is an important one, and if well attended will be fruitful of most beneficial and practical results.

We shall have to use great diligence and industry to be represented at Philadelphia at the proper time. The 10th of January next is appointed as the first day for the reception of articles for the exhibition. The exhibition will be open for visitors on the 10th of May next. We shall have specimens, if possible, of all our minerals ready for exhibition as soon as the exhibition opens on the 10th of May. Those who delight in sight seeing and observing large collections will probably postpone their visit to Philadelphia until the 4th of July, 1876. But the practical man who means business will be present at the earliest moment when he can more quietly and leisurely bestow his whole attention on such departments of the exhibition as he may be most interested in. Let us, therefore, prepare to have our samples of mineral and a description of our country at Philadelphia as early a day as practicable. In the view then we have taken of what we should do to make the exhibition from our section of the State as creditable and reputable as possible, we hope all of our citizens who have reflected upon and taken a deep interest in the subject will be present at our meeting, on the 3rd of June next, to add the grand object we have before us with their counsel and advice.

Since the foregoing address was written in the type we have received a printed copy of the rules and regulations that have been adopted for the government of the Centennial Exhibition at Philadelphia. From these we make the following extract, to which we invite the particular attention of the reader:

"The general reception of articles at the Exhibition buildings will be commenced on January 1st, 1876, and no articles will be admitted after March 31st, 1876."

From this rule it will be perceived by our citizens that it will require considerable promptness, diligence and energy to enable them to prepare and have all the articles they desire to exhibit in the Centennial buildings against the 31st of March next.

LETTER FROM ANDERSON COUNTY

Crops—A Big Farmer—The Springs—Iron Ore and Furnaces—Aboriginal Antiquities, etc.

OLIVER'S P. O., TENN., May 19, 1875.

To the Editors of the Chronicle:

In a rapid transit from Knoxville county to this point, during the week, I was glad to see but little signs remaining of the late frost. The woods are fast getting into full leaf and crops are growing off faster, though not with the best prospect. The floods and cold weather have thrown farmers somewhat behind with corn planting and the baked condition of the bottom land will make its preparation difficult without more rain. Some of the earlier corn is being plowed over for the first time, but it lacks vigor of growth. I find a fair amount of fruit, but the peaches were all killed. There is some very good wheat but oats and grass are backward.

I stopped last night with Uncle Billy Staples over the line in Roane county. He is probably the largest land proprietor in the State, having seven thousand acres in Roane county, alone, besides untold acres in the mountains and elsewhere. His home place contains about four thousand acres in one body. Before the war he raised immense quantities of grain, hay, mules, horses, cattle and hogs. In one year he shipped twenty-two thousand dollars worth of hams of his own raising. He has always been a great trader and never gets tired of telling young men how to take a start. Forty or fifty years ago he commenced business on the mountains, somewhere near Kingston, by going in debt for a horse and a few acres of land. He paid out the first year mainly by hunting venison and selling it at two cents a pound. In the meantime he also traded venison for about fifty calves, and embarked in the cattle business. After that he rose rapidly and surely. He now buys a new farm of from five to seven hundred acres every year or two. There seems to be a greater tendency towards amassing large landed estates out here than near around Knoxville. Farms of from three hundred to seven hundred acres are quite common.

The Springs here are being prepared for visitors. Among the guests already beginning to arrive, I noticed one or two young men from Knoxville. The surroundings are very pleasant, and the water is good. Only its inaccessibility prevents this becoming a place of considerable resort. The scenery is very inspiring and the seduction particularly impressive, there being no nearer approach to the steam-whistle, and other disturbing noises of civilization, than the tinkling cow-bells. It is thought, however, that before many years a railroad will be built near here along the foot of Walden's Ridge connecting the Cincinnati Southern and the Knoxville and Ohio roads. The immense iron deposits reaching from Rockwood and Oakdale on through to Virginia in almost unbroken richness will soon compel such a step. An English company has lately bought near here, and expects to put up works. The time is fast approaching when the smoke-stacks of great furnaces will set their smoke-stacks to stand sentry over these mountains from Chattanooga to the Virginia line.

Before closing I must speak of some interesting Aboriginal remains which I find in this section. On the Staples farm is a salt spring, near which is a large bed of ashes, charcoal, broken pottery and other debris of an ancient salt-workers, operated doubtless by the mound-builders, a race who existed here anterior to the Indians. Similar remains are also found near a salt spring in the gap of Walden's Ridge, not far from Oliver's, and near the old Eastbrook's salt works. At the former place, I succeeded in three or four hours time, with the assistance of a friend, in digging out eighty or ninety pieces of pottery, bones and other relics. The pottery seems to be a compound of red clay and ground mussel shells, lightly burned or dried in the sun. No metal utensils have ever been found. It is probable that these people were identical with the ancient Aztecs, and from some cause, now unknown, abandoned this part of the continent and migrated Southward to Mexico, long before the discovery of America by Columbus. VIATOR.

Millers! Millers!!

Use "Bowles' Improved Current Water Wheel" in rebuilding your mills on the rivers. High water will not effect it, unless it be to increase its power. You can build your mill far above the reach of these terrible freshets. Without dam or race it can give any power you need. It is the cheapest, and by far the safest power for propelling machinery ever invented. Before rebuilding, call and examine this wheel, or address, for further information, DAVID BOWLES, Knoxville, Tenn. Care of John M. Harris. j131wt

Common Sense.

Our bodies need repairing and strengthening as much as the houses we live in. Constant use gradually wears them out, and we must renew them when they exhibit signs of decay. In Dr. Tuttle's Liver Pills, the dyspeptic, the bilious, the debilitated and the nervous will find the most genial and restorative ever offered to the suffering invalid.

A SHOOTING AFFAIR.

Two Young Men Have a Quarrel and the Pistol Does the Work.

Last night about 8 o'clock Mr. Robert Duenner, a young man well known in this community, having for many years been employed at Alvin Barton's Emporium, had a difficulty with a comparative stranger named Ernst von der Wenzel, which resulted in the latter being shot and seriously if not fatally wounded. The facts as we gather them are about as follows:

Some six weeks ago this stranger, an Austrian by birth, arrived in the city and claimed that he had been but a short time in this country, had left Austria on account of some political troubles, and arriving in Richmond, Va., he took sick and there used up all his means. He sought employment in this city, as teacher in languages and music, having enjoyed a thorough education. We gave him the benefit of our columns in making known his wants, and he soon made some acquaintances, and among them the family of Dr. Knaffl, where young Robert Duenner was boarding. He made frequent visits there and of course often met Duenner, and we understand, after becoming better acquainted, told about several duels he had in his native country, and it was suspected that this was the real reason of his leaving there, and not political troubles. Thus matters stood for several weeks, until Mr. Duenner, a few days since, made the remark that he had heard some had reports as to the character of the stranger, which Wenzel heard and took offense at. He told Dr. Knaffl that he expected to call Duenner to account for it, and if he did not retract he would slap him over the head. The Doctor advised him to do neither, and that the best he could do was to let the matter drop. If he should attempt to slap Duenner over and Duenner resisted and shot him the law could not touch him, and on the other hand if he shot Duenner he would be hung. He also told Mr. Knaffl that he would treat Duenner like a child, if he did not retract, and slap him over.

Yesterday he sent Duenner a note to the effect that if Duenner did not retract his childish remarks he would treat him as a child, which note, owing to some words that passed between them on a previous day, was understood by Duenner and replied to in a note, stating that he had not changed his opinion, but considered him a scoundrel, or something to that effect.

Last night they again met at Dr. Knaffl's, who lives on the corner of Clinch and Kennedy streets, just across First Creek, and Wenzel invited Duenner to a drink. Duenner did not at once accept, when Mr. Wenzel remarked that if he did not accept the invitation he would have to brand him as a coward. Duenner then followed him out of the house, and they walked along Kennedy street a short distance, when a scuffle ensued and Wenzel knocked Duenner down, and placing his knee on his breast, and one hand on his throat with the other he caught Duenner's arm. In this position Duenner got hold of his pistol and fired, the first shot missing, owing to Wenzel having hold of his arm, but the second shot took effect on Wenzel, the ball entering under the left eye, and passing under the nose shattered his right cheek bone, inflicting a serious and it was thought at first a fatal wound.

Robert Duenner Acquitted at the Justice's Court.

The case of the State vs. Robert Duenner, for shooting Ernst von der Wenzel on Tuesday night, came up before Justice Ochs Thursday, and resulted in the acquittal of Mr. Duenner.

An Exciting Steamboat Race.

The writer of this left Kingston this morning (May 21st) on the steamer Emory City, bound for London. At the mouth of Clinch river the fast steamer, R. C. Jackson, which heretofore has been the champion runner on the river, bantered the Emory City for a race, which was promptly accepted by the latter. Pine knots and everything except nitro glycerine was thrown on the already glowing fire. Everything being ready, both steamers started off together. Both the pilots and engineers of the boats are brothers, consequently it was a fair race. It was nip and tuck for eighteen miles, bow to bow, sometimes one ahead and then the other; of course then the cheers from the crews of either steamer were given with a vim, until the home stretch, the Emory City was ahead just twenty-one feet and six inches. Pretty close racing for eighteen miles. The R. C. Jackson now carries the horns. Hand them over, gentlemen, to the victors, Capt. Allison and crew, of the Emory City, the fastest boat on the river, so far.

The Mountain Homicide.

We learned, while at Benton last Monday, that all four of the men concerned in killing Horn, some weeks ago, had been arrested. Two of them are in jail—the others out on bail. Several witnesses were before the grand jury on Monday, and the people are under the impression that the affair has a thorough investigation.

We learn, just as we go to press, that the grand jury found true bills against the parties arrested.—Athens Post.

We gave a full account of the above murder, in the CHRONICLE, at the time, our correspondent being the man who first employed the unfortunate man, who was thought to be partially deranged.

Go to Thomas & Co. for your Tomb stones.

Dr. Hart's Advice.

The prediction of the "weatherwise" is that this summer, which is now upon us, is to be one of the warmest we have had for many years, and more than the usual amount of summer diseases may be looked for. Let every one be careful and prudent in their exercise and diet, keep the bowels regular by an occasional dose of Hart's Pills, and have always at hand for immediate use a bottle of Dr. Lytle's Elixir for the Diarrhea.

It is "awful bad" for young men to be out after 12 o'clock at night, and the two we met last night while out in search of items had better be careful, or we will tell their sweethearts.

A DESPERADO ARRESTED

By the Sheriff and a Posse of Nine

Thursday, Sheriff Swan and posse arrived in the city with Wm. Henderlight and a woman with whom he has been living. It seems that this man has committed some depredations in Hawkins county and defied the law. A warrant had also been issued in this county for his arrest on the charge of lewdness and carrying weapons, and learning that he could be found in a boat near McMillan's Station, Sheriff Swan and a posse of the following named persons: Deputy Sheriff McCammon, B. F. Badgett, James Rhea, H. H. Hadden, Cole Nelson, F. Gibbs proceeded to McMillan's, where they were joined by Deputy Sheriff Sullivan and two others, making in all a party of ten men, armed and prepared.

They then proceeded to the river, where his boat was, and found it on the opposite side, but finally got across, and finding him absent they arrested the woman and took charge of the boat, bringing it over on the McMillan side. Henderlight was up the river a short distance in a canoe, and his arrival was awaited. When he came in sight they ordered him to surrender, but he refused, and a number of shots were fired at him to bring him to time, but only two took effect in his arm. He was finally persuaded to land and surrender, and was brought to Knoxville well guarded. He is now safe within the walls of the county jail.

All About the "Desperate Freebooter."

STRAWBERRY PLAINS, May 21. To the Editors of the Chronicle:

I see in the Press and Herald, of this date, an account of the arrest of one Henderlight, near Williams' Station. There seems to have been considerable ammunition wasted. Henderlight is represented as being a very desperate character, living in a fortified boat, in open defiance of all law, having his boat lined with heavy oak plank, and moored at the foot of an overhanging bluff, with a heavy armament on board; and also that this desperado never showed himself, but kept a boy to do all his outside business. This veracious chronicler winds up by saying that the whole story reads like a wild romance. Now the last statement is nearly all the truth in the account—romance, and nothing else. Henderlight has been fishing and trapping in the head of Cane's Eddy for four or five months, and kept his boat landed on the south bank, near the bluff, for the convenience of wood and shelter, and has been acting as public ferryman (free of charge, I think,) all this time. I have never heard him accused of stealing, or molesting any person, in any way. I presume there has not been a day in six months but that he could have been arrested by one man. I know nothing of the charge of adultery—presume the courts are competent to settle that. History teaches us that thousands of men have been judicially murdered, simply because they were condemned before they were tried.

J. M. LUTTRELL.
P. S.—"Nobody hurt on our side." "Let us have peace."

MISSIES' and CHILDREN'S shoes at very low prices. SPECIAL PRICES made to dealers. Call at once and secure bargains. CAMPBELL & DOW, v18wt 44 Gay Street.

The Picnic Season Arrived.

Notwithstanding the heavy run on Lewis, Jackson & Rhea for shoes and hats to attend the various picnics, they have still a fine stock of goods in their line on hand. They sell a great many goods, but being determined to always keep a full stock on hand they are weekly, yes, daily, receiving new goods. Their goods are always of the latest styles and of the best material, which, when taken in connection with the low prices at which they are being sold, makes them go like hot cakes for breakfast among a number of hungry children. In their manufacturing department they always keep the best of workmen and material, and for summer wear there is nothing neater than a pretty pump sole boot made to order. The ladies will not forget that Lewis, Jackson & Rhea's is the place to get those beautiful white kid gaiters or slippers and Philadelphia shoes, and everybody will remember that their establishment is one of the most popular shoe and hat stores in East Tennessee.

How to Kill the Caterpillar.

MORGANTON, GA., May 17. To the Editors of the Chronicle:

I see in your paper, of the 12th inst., that information is wanted relative to the destruction of the caterpillars on fruit trees. I will say they collect during the night in a house or web they prepare on branches of the tree to protect themselves from the dew and cold air, and early in the morning they scatter over the tree, devouring the leaves and young fruit. Now, whenever they begin to form their shelters, or at any time, (but the earlier the better,) take a small torch of rich pine splinters and apply the same to the web very early in the morning before they go forth from their shelter, passing it under and through it hurriedly, which will destroy every one of them without injury to the tree, or if you prefer, shoot a powder gun at the bulk without a wad, holding the muzzle of the gun close to the bulk; either or both processes will destroy them all if applied as described.

F. HATCHETT.

Marriage Licenses.

The following marriage licenses are recorded in the office of the County Court Clerk for the week ending Saturday, May 22, 1875:

Russell Johnson and Mary A. Ford. Orlander McMillan and Sarah J. Giddens.

C. T. Galt and Betty Fowler. Jos. Walton and Eliza Rockhold. Fritz Mettler and Tennessee Henderson.

D. A. Smith and Maggie Jones. Fred Dancer and Mary Jane Murphy. Alfred Norman and Maggie Dozier.

EAST TENNESSEE NEWS.

Loudon county has a wool carding machine in operation now.

Capt. Trotter of Sevier county arrived at the wharf yesterday with one boat load of grain—300 bushels of wheat and 100 bushels of corn.

Bacus Hines, colored, the Washington county desperado, who made his escape from the jail, but was recaptured, has withdrawn his appeal to the Supreme Court and has been taken to Nashville.

Fall Branch Items, in Jonesboro Herald and Tribune: Some of our neighbors' dogs made an outbreak upon some sheep last Saturday. Four were found dead and others badly wounded. We are more in favor of the "dog law" than ever.

Rev. D. Sullins, D. D., President of Sullins' College, Bristol, Tenn., will dedicate the new Southern Methodist Church at Unita, Loudon county, East Tenn., on Sunday, July 11th, 1875. This edifice is a neat and commodious one. Rev. J. R. Payne preacher in charge.

Jonesboro Herald and Tribune: William Johnson, aged sixteen years, was drowned, in the Nola Clucky River, near Earnest's store, last Saturday morning. His body was recovered about 2 o'clock p. m.—Rev. Mr. Goldman, pastor of the M. E. Church at Knoxville, delivered an excellent temperance address at the Grange meeting last Tuesday.

The Athens Post says: The Cumberland Church on Fork Creek, which was destroyed during the February flood and storms, is to be rebuilt. The Sabbath Schools and Good Templars of Benton propose to have a grand celebration at Four Mile Branch, Polk county, on the 3d of July. Benton has three flourishing Sabbath Schools—and the Good Templars number many members. To the everlasting credit of Polk, be it said, there is not a licensed grove or tipping house in town or county.

Greeneville Intelligencer: It is said that Davy Crockett's marriage license is on record at Dandridge.—One among the most valuable farms in Washington county once sold for a shot gun and a pair of leather breeches. Some time ago that same farm sold for about $12,400.—Most all the illicit distillers on "Newman's Ridge" in Hancock county, are idle at present. Some talk of surrendering their stills and quitting the business.
